Transnational care: Polish case

In Polish discourse on parents' migration, particularly migration of women, negative effects of migration are primarily stressed. Children from migrant families are often referred to as "incomplete" or "incomplete". The discourse highlights both child and mother who "prefer euro to child's good". But in fact there's no

As an ex of all, Polish migration is preoccupied with the children and their everyday life. This includes their education, social care, and emotional support. Therefore, it's crucial to understand the

Conclusion

The research shows that the situation of children in migrant families has changed. It cannot be concluded that the migration of mothers has negative consequences for the education and upbringing of the child. Yet, it can be said that migration intensifies the pre-existing problems of the child (sexual abuse, behavioral problems). Females who functioned pre-migration in the caregiver situation mobilize their resources, while the mother is actively involved in the lives of families through new technologies. Interestingly, in some cases, mothers' migration has a positive impact on family life. It was in the cases where the mother was the destabilizing factor in the lives of children. Unfortunately, it's hard to draw conclusions about the role of migration in the lives of families.
